ICC Director Ralph Kruse thanks the people who made the telecourse happen. The party was held in the ICC and marked the completion of the project which took almost two years.

Success Celebrated

by Buzz Hume

"It was the most grueling production experience I've ever had!" admitted Tony Labriola, the television producer/director in the Instructional Communications Center at GSU. He was referring to the recently completed Health Care Organization telecourse, a series of 23 videotapes that required over two years to produce. It is the largest television production ever undertaken by the University.

On September first, Television Studio B in the ICC was decorated with signs, an ongoing slide show, two video monitors and a generous amount of food and drink. Many people showed up to celebrate and watch the first airing of the show on Channel 20. They ranged from the Administration, including President Leo Goodman-Malamuth and Ralph Kruse, director of the ICC, to students who had worked on the production in many phases, from building sets to assisting in the actual taping of the series.

My own memories of the HCO project dealt with going on two remote shoots as photographer and grip. And after personally lugging a 50 lb. video recorder all over Minneapolis and Washington DC in an effort to get interviews and scenes at major hospitals and health organizations, I readily agree with Tony! I would also say that it was one of the most rewarding educational experiences I had at GSU and I wouldn't have missed it for anything.

The Health Care Organization Telecourse is actually a comprehensive survey of the entire medical organization in the country. Divided into five separate units, it deals with a number of topics, ranging from the legal and administrative aspects of health care to specific modes of treatment, including comparisons between military and civilian care.

It deals with the many factors that affect the industry, from politics to the impact of new technologies. In addition, present and future careers in health care are discussed.

Intended primarily for college sophomores and juniors, the program also provides current information for people already working in the health care industry. Many times people in the business are so specialized in their field that they know relatively little about the rest of the total system. HCO will give them a broad overview of the many diverse aspects involved, as well as give them the continuing education credits their jobs require.

A major strongpoint of the telecourse is the great variety of people and locations throughout the series. Numerous hospitals and medical centers on the south side and greater Chicago area volunteered their facilities for the production. Remote crews also traveled to Washington, D.C., Los Angeles, California, and Minneapolis, Minnesota. Other organizations sent footage from locations throughout the country that the University crew didn't physically travel to. The end result is a program with a far more diversified and in depth approach to subjects ranging from administration to various modes of specialized care. At several points, interviews with experts all over the country deal with different points of view on a single topic. This could not possibly have been done in the classroom.

Planning the telecourse began over two years ago. Subject to the ebbs and tides of University priorities, the project was finally given the green light for production last year. The actual taping and editing of the series was done in a number of intensively concentrated time periods over the course of about a year.

Good Luck!

by Michael Blackburn

Now that classes are well under way at GSU, I would like to welcome all students to the Fall term of the 1983-84 academic year.

There has recently been a lot of talk about change at GSU. The physical campus as well as the internal structure of the university is changing. Whether it be the addition of trees, re-lettering of the building or academic realignment, these changes were initiated by the administration and faculty in the hope of making GSU a more appealing and credible institution.

However, there are some things at GSU that the administration and faculty can't change. Things like participation and pride have to be changed by us - the students. These two concepts are so inter-related that one can't exist without the other. If the level of student participation in the university process is high, student pride will naturally follow.

The structure for student participation at GSU exists and there are times when the powers-that-be at this university speak very highly of the level of student involvement. There are also those times when, like all institutions of higher learning, this university displays a flagrant disregard for students.

It is up to students to be aware of the state of affairs at GSU. If student involvement is high and the governance system is working, take note of it - tell your fellow students about it - be proud of it! On the other hand, if it appears that student participation is not being encouraged, if you think the governance system is failing, if you feel the university is being insensitive to students, take note of this also, make the GSU community aware of any perceived disservice to students.

This is our university! Though we all don't have the time to be active in one of the many clubs on campus, the program advisory committee or the student senate, we can still be involved through our awareness.

Good luck in all of your endeavors.

Campus Notes Senate Election

Ten students are officially in the race for Student Senate seats after filing petitions for the elections on September 20, 21 and 22.

In the positions for students-at-large, those that have filed include: Jean O'Kosi, Steve Homberg, Dapo Ogunwuyi, Thompson Adesida, Chris A. Iyamah, Kenny Bankole, Phoebe Emechebe and Larry Lulay, who is seeking another term.

Laura Marshall (CBPA) and Beverly Randle (College of Education) have also completed filing. Petitions for Debra A. McEllenborough and Jim Perez are still out. Deadline for filing is 8:00 pm on September 13. Those still wishing to run should stop at the Student Activities Resource Office, Monday through Friday 8:30am-8:00pm and Saturday, 8:30-12:00 bin project. The purpose of the reception was to provide a common ground where all CBPA students could come together and join clubs that work in their area of study.

Club membership carries with it an affiliate status with professional organizations. Club members feel that this is one avenue by which they will be able to enter into the professional life they hope to pursue.

Each club official was able to point to a stack of applications. However, no count was taken of those who actually showed up for the event. Steve Homberg of the Accounting club says that he personally contacted many people.

Various reasons were given for the attendance which included being early in the trimester and location. Each club official was pleased enough with the response that they are already planning to have another reception later in the Academic Year.

Club Reception

Although the turnout was not what they expected, still the leaders of the various business clubs claimed success for the reception they held for prospective members in Engbretson Hall and plan another.

This was the first time that the clubs—Accounting, American Marketing Association, Public Administration and the Society for the Advancement of Management—went together on a com-

What do I tell my children?

How much and what do I tell my children about sex? What can I say to my kids about sex when I feel uncomfortable talking about it? How can I tell my kids what I believe without turning them off? How do I protect my daughter from peer pressures? Can I talk about contraceptives without seeming to approve sexual activity?

These are just a few of the questions pertaining to sexuality that parents ask, looking for guidance at a time when statistics point to escalating adolescent pregnancies and abortions. One out of six babies is born to a teenage mother; one out of three abortions in the U.S. is for an adolescent pregnancy.

For parents desiring a better approach to discussing sex with their children, GSU is sponsoring a free series of parents' seminars on adolescent sexuality on four successive Wednesday evenings from 7:30-9:30, beginning September 14.

Marsha Conroy, of Health Partners of South Cook County Task Force on Adolescent Sexuality will lead the discussions. The sessions were developed by the March of Dimes National PTA Association.

The approach of the program is to place the responsibility for talking about sexuality in the family atmosphere, whether it be a one or two parent situation. The emphasis is on open and clear communication based on good listening, nonjudgmental attitudes, accurate information, trust and empathic understanding.

Often, parents find it too difficult to talk about sex with their children. All too often, there is little, if any, communication between parent and child about: the emotional upheaval accompanying physical changes, the child's emerging needs for autonomy and intimacy and peer pressures which add to the confusion arising from inadequate and incorrect information.

The seminar will be cosponsored by KIDS in Divorce, Inc., a non-profit peer group counseling service; the GSU Division of Psychology and Counseling and the GSU Psychology Club. While the seminar is free, there is a minimal charge for materials.

For registration and other information, call Shirley Grant at 534-5000, extension 2394, between 8:30 and 5:00 pm.

At GSU BHE Meets

by Alexander Samuels

The Illinois Board of Higher Education recommended that all high school students who wish to prepare for baccalaureate programs should complete four years of study in English, Mathematics, Social Studies and Science.

At the August 27 meeting held at Governors State, the IBHE stated that students should complete studies in English, "emphasizing written and oral communication." In Social Studies, the emphasis should be on history and government while mathematics should consist of an introductory course "through advanced Algebra, Geometry and Trigonometry and the fundamentals of a computer program." The IBHE also suggested that Science courses should "include Biology, Chemistry and Physics."

Alexander Samuels serves as GSU's representative to the IBHE.

The board also suggested that study of a foreign language for at least two years.

An Opinion Survey: As proposed by the IBHE, is four years of study in each of the following areas necessary for high school students?

ENGLISH-Written and oral communication.	Yes	No
SOCIAL STUDIES-History and Government.	Yes	No
SCIENCE-Biology, Chemistry and Physics.	Yes	No

This survey will be very necessary and will effectively aid your representative at the next meeting of the IBHE/SAC on October 1. Please detach and submit to the Information Booth by September 30.

At Chicago State

Blacks Convene

What is believed to be the first statewide conference specifically for black elected officials at all levels of government will convene on the campus of Chicago State University on Saturday, Sept. 24. Sponsored by the Institute for Public Policy and Administration of Governors State University, the program will feature a keynote address by Chicago Mayor Harold Washington.

According to Dr. Robert B. Donaldson, university professor of public administration at Governors State and conference coordinator, the purpose of the confab is "to analyze the dynamic political changes taking place in the black community and how these changes will impact not only on black elected officials and their constituents but also on the entire state of Illinois."

Topics of six panel discussions are: The Role of the Black Church in the Political Process for the 1980s; Black Politics and Resurgence of Minority Voting; Strategies for Involving Black Elected Officials in the Slatemaking Process on the National, State and Local Levels; Strategies for Black Solidarity: Linkages, Unity, Networking and Communication; The Leadership Role of Black Elected Officials for the 1980s; and Impact of the 1983 Chicago Mayoral Elections on State and Local Political Processes for the 1980s.

From the opening at 9 am through the end of the proceedings at about 3 pm, the roster of presenters and panelists reads like a VIP list of the black community. Panelists include Cecil Partee, Chicago City treasurer and committeeman; John H. Stroger, Cook County commissioner and committeeman; and Thomas Fuller, commissioner of the Metropolitan Sanitary District.

State Senators Margaret Smith (12th Dist.), Richard Newhouse (13th Dist.), Charles Chew (16th Dist.), Emil Jones, Jr. (17th Dist.), and Kenneth Hall (57th Dist.) are on the program. So are State representatives Robert LeFlore (15th Dist.), Larry S. Bullock (23rd Dist.), Carol Mosely-Braun (25th Dist.), Ethel S. Alexander (32nd Dist.), and Wyvetter H. Younge (113th Dist.).

Chicago aldermen scheduled to appear include Timothy C. Evans (4th Ward), Allan Streeter (17th Ward), Clifford P. Kelley (20th Ward), and Danny K. Davis (29th Ward). Mayor Carl Officer of East St. Louis is also a panelist.

Each of the panels will be moderated by a black member of Chicago's media. They include Leanita McClain, editorial writer of the Chicago Tribune; Philip Smith, political editor of "Dollars and Sense" magazine; and Juanita Bratcher, reporter for Chicago Daily Defender. Also, Bebe D'Banana, program director at WJPC-AM; Derek Hill, of "Common Grounds" from WBBM-TV and Harry Porterfield, WBBM-TV News.

Mayor Washington will deliver his address following lunch, which will be at 1:30.

Conference registration will begin at 8:30 am in Room 102 of Building B on the Chicago State University campus at 95th and South King Dr. Cost of the conference is $10, including all materials and lunch. There is a special rate of $7 for students with valid ID cards. There is free parking in the lot on the south side of the campus.

For further information, call Dr. Donaldson at Governors State University at (312) 534-5000, Ext. 2283.

Chillers Discussed

For movie buffs who like their films full of thrills and chills, and then can hardly wait to get out of the theatre and analyze the whole thing, Governors State University has a fall film festival that will keep them on the edges of their chairs.

"Psychological Thrills and Puzzles" will feature six of the all-time favorite films directed by Antonioni, DePalma, Polanski, Altman and Hitchcock, the masters of this genre. After each film, Ken McMillan, longtime movie critic for Star Publications, will lead a discussion and analysis of the movie and various techniques used by these renowned filmmakers.

Each movie will be shown three times during the evening—at 5, 7 and 9:30. The discussion will follow the middle showing, but series subscribers are welcome to see the other scheduled showings at no extra cost. The movies will be shown in the GSU Theatre.

The series, which is co-sponsored by the Office of Student Activities and the Office of Conferences and Workshops, includes:

Sept. 15—"Blow-up," directed by Michelangelo Antonioni and starring David Hemmings, Vanessa Redgrave and Sarah Miles.

Sept. 29—"Biow Out," directed by Brian DePalma and starring John Travolta and Nancy Allen.

Oct. 13—"Repulsion," directed by Roman Polanski and starring Catherine Deneuve.

Oct. 27—"Images," directed by Robert Altman and starring Suzannah York and Marcel Bozzuffi.

Nov. 10—"Psycho," directed by Alfred Hitchcock and starring Anthony Perkins, Janet Leigh and Vera Miles.

Dec. 1—"Dressed to Kill," directed by DePalma and starring Michael Caine, Angie Dickinson and Nancy Allen.

Cost of the series, including the film and the discussion, is $20. Students with a valid ID will pay half price, $10. Only series subscribers will be admitted to the discussion sessions. However, admission to individual performances alone, without the discussion, is available to the public at the box office at $2.00 per show for the general public, $1.50 for GSU faculty and staff, members of the GSU Alumni Association and senior citizens, and $1.00 for children under 12. Tickets purchased in advance at the GSU Cashier's Office are sold at discount.

Because of the nature of some of these films, parental guidance is suggested for children under 12.

For further information, contact the Office of Conferences and Workshops, Governors State University, Park Forest South, IL 60466, or call (312) 534-5000, Ext. 2436.

Student Involvement

As the Student Senate elections draw near, what happened to all those students who complained about student apathy? So far, only ten students have filed as candidates in this election.

Surely, there must be students who are willing to serve their fellow students in this important job. The Senate is the student body's official voice in university governance.

One responsibility that Senators have is to serve on university wide committees, in either a voting or advisory capacity. The actions of these committees have a direct impact upon student life. It would be a shame to waste these forums.

For many getting involved with student government is impossible, because of other commitments. However, there is one way to get involved. Vote!

It is quite easy to walk by the voting booth and offer excuses such as being late for class or other pressing business. They may be legitimate. But stop and think for a moment. Casting a ballot is the difference between having representation or not having representation.

If it were not for the students, there would be no university. This is as true for part time students as it is for full time students. Each student, whether they are taking one course or five, has a vested interest in the educational processes of this university.

Student interests can only be represented by other students properly. Others have their own particular fields of interest. At times those interests are the same, but at other times students can be left out on the cold if they do not choose to participate.

Sept. 20, 21 and 22 will be the dates for the election. Take a moment. Vote!

Sudden Death

Suddenly the world's two great super powers, the United States and the Soviet Union, are locked in battle. We went to bed one night thinking that a South Korean airliner, carrying 269 persons, had been forced to land on Sakhalin Island after violating Soviet airspace. The next morning, we awoke to the fact that the plane was shot from the skies and all on board killed.

In the confusion that followed, many questions were left unanswered and many charges and counter charges were initiated by both sides. At first the Soviets refused to acknowledge that the incident took place, but later changed to state that there was some type of violation of their air space, but when their fighters had gone "to assist" the violator the plane had gone off towards to the Sea of Japan and was finally lost on their radar.

President Reagan went on national television Labor Day night to address the matter. He acknowledged, as reported by Representative Jim Wright, (D Texas), that there was a United States reconnaissance plane in the area on the night of the shooting. He also announced that the United States would continue to pursue its course of action the Security Council of the United Nations.

He did not, however, call for immediate and drastic sanctions such as cancelling diplomatic relations as had been called for by several right wing groups. This did not satisfy those who would ostracize the Soviet Union from the community of mankind and thus push them into a corner which would cause them to "come out fighting." By placing the Soviet Union in that corner, the U.S. would lose its rights to negotiate with them and the alternative to that is war, with the prospect of the total annihilation of civilization as we know it.

On the other hand, not to do anything not only allows, but actually encourages the Soviet Union in its bully-like behavior. This is totally unacceptable. The United States has focused world attention on this problem, in the Security Council of the United Nations.

This move has paid off to some degree. After listening to Soviet fighter pilot's tapes, the Soviet Union was forced to admit that it has indeed shot down an unarmed civilian air plane. However, the Russians then tried to blame the United States for the whole incident by saying that it was a "spy plane."

Certainly there are many unanswered questions concerning this incident. But the condemnation of Soviet behavior cannot be one of those questions. They did it; they admitted it; and must now stand in shame before the entire civilized world.

It was unfortunate that President Reagan chose to use this incident as a platform from which to launch a renewed political campaign for the passage of the MX Missile Program. To trade upon the fears and hysteria that have been generated by this incident does nothing to honor the memory of these unfortunate human beings.

But that still leaves us with many unanswered questions.

... If the Japanese could hear the Soviet transmissions, could they have warned the plane?

... Why, when the South Korean pilot reported an incorrect position, didn't the air controller question him on his position?

... Why was the incident originally reported by the CIA?

... Where did the order to shoot come from? (The Soviets now report that it was done solely on the authority of the local commander.)

... Is there a way that future tragedies can be avoided?

These are among the questions that come to mind. It would also ease the minds of many if the Soviet Union would discontinue its current practice of denying access to their territory so that a search can be conducted. There is no need now to prolong the agony and sorrow of these families.

... WELL COMMAND, IT LOOKS LIKE IT SAYS CIA.

Letters

Letter to the editor

On Sept. 1, GSU held an Academic Convocation for the 1983-84 year. This institutional pep-rally was attended by representatives from "almost" every facet of the university.

In addition to the inspiring comments made by the university president, Beth Harms, president of the Civil Service Senate, added her perspective to an analogy made by Dr. Michael Purdy, Faculty Senate President, in the last edition of the INNOVATOR.

In a welcoming message, Dr. Purdy wrote that the faculty was the body and that students were the life-blood of that body and that each Fall the body gets an infusion of new life. In her address to the convocation, Harms said that she felt that the civil service workers of GSU, (secretaries, clerical workers, maintenance workers, etc.) were the heart that pumped the blood through the body.

If the analogy made by Dr. Purdy and Beth Harms holds true, the failure of the university to invite students to attend and participate in this year's convocation resulted in nothing more than trying to stir a dry and lifeless organ.

I think the student body deserves an explanation about why they were excluded from an event that was touted to be geared to the "entire" university community.

Editor:

I have just read the August 29 issue of the INNOVATOR. I am writing regarding these areas: registration and schedule.

I agree with the one who wrote about registration. First, I feel, fees should be paid the day pre-registration is done, especially when one course is involved as well as great travel distance.

For me, it means two trips and coming after work. On registration day I drove 50 miles one way to finish registration and pay fees and then back to Kankakee after that. That seems a lot for one course when it could be done the day you pre-register or else could be done by mail. The congested area where you get ID's and other material should be relieved.

It seems that the 4:30 pm class is early for a class as several of us must come from a distance for a course. Again, I drive close to 50 miles and get there a little late.

My boss is good to let me off early. Time off is not easy to arrange.

7:30 is late, but is better than 4:30 for me. Even if the classes were scheduled at 5 pm, that would help. Fortunately, my professor was kind enough to let me come a little late. When I get there, finding a parking space is a problem.

So these are some of my problems and I am interested in finishing my work in Special Education.

Sincerely yours,
Harry A. Parkhill

Job Notes

by Mary Hughes

You now have attended several classes and know the papers expected and the books required to be read. Also your boss is on you with the fall work schedule and deadlines. Or even worse, you don't have a boss or a paycheck and you need to organize a job hunt. The children are back in school and the relaxed summer schedule is replaced by the hectic dash to catch the bus.

Are you getting a feeling of panic? For those of you returning after a long academic absence, it may be overwhelming. Here are some time management survival tips from counselor Sue Brown in Student Development:

Establish schedules for the month with goals and priorities.

Eliminate, modify or delegate everything else.

Make a daily list of "must do's."

Break up long-range projects into manageable chunks, doing a bit each day. Lots of things can be accomplished in small amount of time.

Sculpture Almost Done

by Buzz Hume

"Bodark Arc," the environmental sculpture at the distant pond between "Prairie Chimes" and "Falling Meteor" is nearing completion. The archway, bridge and path have been assembled and laid down for some time; more recently the bronze chair and rocks have been added.

I have been out to the site only once, and what impressed me most about Martin Puryear's work was the archway. It is reminiscent of Oriental arches, only in a simple way; there are no ornate carvings to be found. What it does have, however, is some of the most beautiful wood I have ever seen. It is so smooth and silky, it's hard to believe it came from a tree. In a month or so, grass will be laid down and forms removed, the finishing touches added by the artist. I'm looking forward to seeing the work completed.

At this point I can only guess what it will be like, but even at this stage I think it is an interesting concept for the artist to provide paths - viewpoints - for the viewer to walk along and look from. "Field Rotation," the Mary Miss piece in front of the school, does this to some extent with the corners and towers (even providing a somewhat "aerial" viewpoint for the strong and brave!), but "Bodark Arc" accomplishes this in a much more well defined way.

Aside from the excitement of "Untitled" appearing on the campus, we have yet another work of art scheduled to grace our prairies hopefully by the end of the summer. Bruce Nauman has recently been commissioned to complete the Nathan Manilow Sculpture Park with his "Divided House." This unique piece will be composed entirely of concrete and be the only sculpture to be lit during the evening hours. The "House" will contain a diagonal wall that will allow only half the structure to be visible. The other half will remain a subject of speculation. Sounds like it should provide us with some food for thought!

As the final sculpture gets ready to leave the drawing board, promotion for the sculpture park is gearing up. Some of the money in the Foundation (no student or state funds are used for the sculptures) has already been used to purchase advertising space in Art Forum and other publications, and more will be earmarked for publicity in the future.

The Lintel invites the passer-by to enter this area and relax. It encourages one to walk into the shade of the Osage Orange and sit on the ceremonial stool and enter into the world of contemplation and renewal. This entrance is the most prominent place to enter the sculpture. The artist built several more into the area. He hoped that as an individual was passing, the entrances would be discovered and thus the person would enter into this area.

Sonya Snyder, who is nearing completion of a master's degree in health administration, was recently awarded the Bugbee-Falk Book Award. The honor was conferred by the Association of University Programs in Health Administration, in recognition of academic and professional achievements. Snyder is employed at Palos Community Hospital and was President of the Chicago Hospital Personnel Management Association. An outdoor enthusiast, she enjoys skiing. Among other hobbies, and one she shares with her husband Dan, is lapidary. She creates most of the jewelry that she wears.
